ROMANTIC WORKSHOP #15

A TEXTURED CARESS

This workshop features suggestions for a foreplay activity that you as a couple may find pleasantly effective. Its intent is to not only prolong your foreplay, but to also make the foreplay more effective in its ability to arouse intense passion and really get the juices flowing. Extending the time that you spend at foreplay will intensify the pleasure you experience during sexual intercourse. This happens because anticipation is given a chance to transmit a full message from your brain to your pleasure centers. It is also a well known fact that women have a greater need for a prolonged foreplay time than men do. But men can benefit from extended foreplay as well. This workshop will accomplish that, and more, with a special twist.

The title of this workshop pretty much describes the method employed for your extended foreplay activity. In preparation you will need to collect a number of textured objects. Suggestions include a piece of silk material, satin material, an unused wide sable makeup brush, a feather, a strip of very soft lambs' wool cut from a babies' wool hide throw, a nylon stocking, a piece of soft cotton material, baby powder, a piece of fur coat cut from the collar or sleeve of an old fur coat, or any other texture you wish to include. If you have a full length fur coat at your disposal, you may wish to lay your caress victim on it for an added feature of your special caress. Take your time and make more use of the texture that gets the best response. It is suggested that one partner per session be the recipient of this textured caress. The chosen one should be slowly undressed with plenty of tender kisses and gently laid down on a bed, face down, because both sides should get equal treatment and you want to save the best side for last. Direct your caress recipient to lie still and close their eyes and just enjoy the treatment. Use slow caressing movements with your textures and drag the material across your lovers' skin. Leave no area untreated and watch and listen for responses to extra sensitive spots. Give these areas extra attention so that passion may build. Drag two textures at the same time for added effect. Also take note of which texture is the best with clues from the partner who is getting caressed. Wet kisses placed on strategic spots at the same time will have a great added effect. When you feel that your textured caress recipient has begun to respond to your attentions, it is time to direct him or her to flip over. Repeat the treatment described above for the front. Remember to make extra use of the texture that got the best response while doing the back side. Wait until signs of increased passion are evident before you begin work on the nipples and genitals. Prolong the textured caress beyond your lovers' pleas to move on past the foreplay and you will have him or her begging! Have fun!
